Origin and Breeding History of the Variety

'Morangold' originated from a single plant selection made in 1971 in the breeding line F406A4-1-1-1, a sister line of the protected variety 'Cal K-60', PVPO number 7400014. The selection, designated as F406A4-1-1-1A, was earlier in maturity, slightly darker green with a slightly longer core than other plants in the line. Following four generations of mass selection, F406A4-1-1-1A was grown for seed multiplication during the summer of 1975. No variants were observed during the four generations of mass selection and subsequent seed multiplication, except for the natural rogue mutations normally found in crisphead lettuce varieties, indicating that the line was highly stable for plant and bolting type. Varietal performance trials conducted in the Imperial Valley and the central coastal valleys of California during 1974 and 1975 have also shown that 'Morangold' is very uniform for type and has retained the characteristics that distinguish it from 'Cal K-60' or other existing varieties.

EXHIBIT B*Botanical Description of the Variety*

'Morangold' belongs to the crisphead class of lettuce varieties and to the Great Lakes varietal type. The variety most closely resembles 'Cal K-60'.

The seed is white with no special characteristics that distinguish it from other white seeded Great Lakes lettuce varieties. Seedling emergence is fairly rapid and vigorous with normal growth during seedling development.

The mature plant of 'Morangold' is medium dark green, slightly darker green than 'Cal K-60' but lighter green than 'Montemar'. The frame is medium large with medium high wrapper leaves arranged loosely around the head. Wrapper leaves are medium thick with a glossy surface reflectance and slightly blistered surface texture. Leaf margins are wavy and moderately incised. The cap leaf is more puckered or blistered in appearance than the wrapper leaves and is more subject to frost damage than 'Cal K-60' when grown in the Imperial Valley for harvest during late December and early January.

Heads are round with a slightly flattened base, have good to adequate cover and have little tendency to spiral. Head size is comparable to 'Cal K-60' and the variety has the ability to produce solid heads when grown during recommended planting periods in California. Butts are slightly flattened, medium smooth in appearance with slightly ribby petioles, a medium core diameter and a slightly longer core length than 'Cal K-60'. Harvested heads of 'Morangold' have no suckers of significant size.

'Morangold' is more concentrated in maturity and two to three days earlier than 'Cal K-60'. Based on average climatic conditions in the Salinas Valley, 'Morangold' planted during early July will mature in 62-66 days while 'Cal K-60' under similar cultural practices requires 64-69 days from planting to maturity. The number of days from planting to maturity is progressively greater the earlier or later the planting date departs from the early July planting period.

The seedstalk is uniformly medium tall and is similar in final height and size of inflorescence to 'Cal K-60'.

'Morangold' has moderate resistance to tipburn and resistance to the same races of downy mildew as Calmar.

- 13a First, give the genealogy, including public and commercial varieties, lines, or clones used, and the breeding method. Second, give the details of subsequent stages of selection and multiplication. Third, indicate the type and frequency of variants during reproduction and multiplication and state how these variants may be identified. Fourth, provide evidence on stability.
- 13b First, give any special characteristics of the seed and of the plant as it passes through the seedling stage, flowering stage and the fruiting stage. Second, describe the mature plant and compare it with a similar commercial variety grown under the same conditions, and indicate the differences.
